Monthly Summary

The NAV of CERVINO (R) went up by 1.8% during July (share class R). In 2025 the accumulated return is 3.3% which represents 44,2% since inception, and a CAGR of 5,7%.

July proved to be a month of relative calm in financial markets, with sentiment gradually turning more constructive as the weeks went on. The modest rebound in forward-looking indicators (Soft Data) and renewed hopes for progress in U.S. trade negotiations provided some support to risk appetite. Meanwhile, the spotlight remained firmly on the U.S. dollar – the dominant theme of the year – as its persistent weakness against the euro continued to shape global portfolio returns.

Toward the end of the month, the dollar staged a late rebound of 3.2%, buoyed by renewed rhetoric around "American exceptionalism." Even so, this late recovery was not enough to offset the structural weakness seen year-to-date, while the euro maintained an unusually strong footing.

Equity markets posted moderate gains. The S&P 500 rose 2.2%, while Europe's Stoxx 600 advanced 1%. The Nasdaq led the way, up 3.7% on the back of a strong performance from U.S. tech names, bringing Growth and Value back to level ground with year-to-date returns of 10.8% each. Both U.S. and European equities are now up 7.8% in 2025, a far cry from the early months of the year when Europe outperformed the U.S. by more than 13 percentage points. Meanwhile, China's market quietly gained 2.9% in July, pushing its year-to-date performance above 23% (Hang Seng Index), making it one of the standout markets globally.

U.S. macro data painted a mixed picture. Inflation surprised to the upside at 2.9% versus expectations of 2.6% and higher than June's 2.4%. Soft Data indicators improved somewhat, narrowing the historic gap with Hard Data and providing tentative support for economic momentum. GDP for Q2 came in at 3% versus 2.6% expected, although tariff-related distortions make this number less reliable. A more accurate gauge is the first half of 2025 compared to 2024: growth slowed to 1.25% year-on-year from 2.3% last year.

The Federal Reserve maintained a cautious stance, with Chair Jerome Powell reiterating that it is too early to cut rates until there is greater clarity on underlying economic conditions and the inflationary effects of elevated tariffs. The month's main headline was the announcement of a U.S.-EU trade deal. While markets welcomed the news, the final tariff level of 15% was higher than expected, and many uncertainties remain. Key sectors such as steel, aluminum, and pharmaceuticals were left unresolved, and Europe committed to ambitious energy purchases from the U.S. ($250B annually) that may prove unrealistic. The deal is partial and largely symbolic, easing near-term risks but leaving the door open for renewed tensions ahead.

Within the portfolio, more than 15 holdings delivered gains above 5%. Top contributors included Corning (+20%), Vermilion Energy (+13%), Piraeus Financial (+15%), Reckitt Benckiser (+14%), and Brookfield (+11%). On the downside, over 10 names declined more than 5%, led by Novo Nordisk (-28%), Fiserv (-19%), Software One (-15%), Persimmon (-11%), and ASML (-9%).

On the trading front, we used the last month to add to our position in Assa Abloy, Alphabet, Fiserv, Cellnex, and Total Energies. We also made partial profits in Piraeus Financial, locking in gains of over 82%, and fully exited Brookfield after achieving a return of more than 100%.
